

What They Did to Me Was Disgusting. Now the Evidence Is Out — and People Are Furious.

For years they sat in rooms with my file, knew my history, knew what they were doing, and chose to do it anyway. Their names are now in a 2,077-document archive downloaded 217,000 times. The truth defended itself.

By Dr. Richard William McLean (Barran Dodger) — Ph.D., Author, Human Rights Advocate

For a long time, I sat in silence.

Completely swallowed by the shock of what they did to me. I stared at the wall — in homeless shelters, in the front seat of a car, in psychiatric wards where I had been detained against my will — replaying the events in my mind, trying to make sense of the absolute cruelty of it all. I asked myself over and over again: How could someone do this? How could they look me in the eye, know my history, know my heart, and still choose to do something so intentionally destructive?

I felt completely isolated. I felt like I was the only person on the planet who could see their true colours.

To the rest of the world, they played the victim. They smiled. They charmed the rooms. And they painted me as the villain — a delusional paranoid schizophrenic who filed complaints because he couldn't accept reality.

They thought they got away with it.

They thought the grave they dug for me was deep enough to hide their betrayal.

They were wrong.

Let Me Tell You Exactly What They Did — and Name the People Who Did It

This is not metaphor. This is not therapeutic framing. These are the documented actions of named individuals and named institutions, verifiable in primary-source government records at:

It wasn't a mistake. It wasn't a misunderstanding. It was calculated. It was disgusting.

Russell Ball — a private lawyer who simultaneously represented medical professionals in malpractice suits — circulated a written narrative branding me an "extortionist" across five separate oversight bodies: the Health Complaints Commissioner, the Mental Health Complaints Commissioner, AHPRA, IBAC, and Victoria Police. He described himself in correspondence as "advising the Ombudsman" and "informing Government policy." The result: every body I filed a complaint with had already been pre-briefed that I was a dangerous fraudster. None disclosed the conflict. None investigated the circular contamination.

The AHRC — the Australian Human Rights Commission, the body that exists specifically to protect people in my position — received my active suicide notes on 28 August 2020. They did not call. They did not escalate. They did not refer me to crisis services. Four days later, after I had already overdosed inside Werribee Mercy Hospital and survived, they sent a response. It contained a generic Lifeline number.

ASIO — I reported that my former partner was an intelligence employee concealing millions in offshore income and issuing death threats. Government correspondence now in the public archive names ASIO supervisor David Irving by name, and tracks $30,000 per month in hidden offshore income. The report was not investigated. It was used to label me paranoid.

DSS and ComCare — Federal Court official Scott Treadwell formally confirmed my DSS employment in writing. The DSS portal simultaneously showed my status as "Active." Both DSS and ComCare denied my employment to every body that asked — denying it specifically to block my WorkCover claims and whistleblower protections. The contradiction is not an allegation. It is a document. Both documents are in the archive.

PM&C — The Prime Minister and Cabinet department's own FOI system returned 1,178 responsive documents about me on 24 February 2022. A subsequent formal response declared that "no documents were identified as relevant." The same system. The same FOI request. 1,178 to zero — without explanation, without appeal, without accountability.

Minister Reynolds — referred my active housing crisis to Services Australia, who referred it to the NDIA, who rejected it and referred it back to "mainstream support," who referred it to the AHRC, who referred it to Victoria Police, who referred it elsewhere. I documented this referral loop in sequential correspondence. It is not a theory. It is a filing system.

Monash Health — forcibly injected me with psychiatric medication for believing things their own clinical records describe as accurate. Their documentation states I am "neither psychotic nor delusional." They injected me anyway. I now hold that documentation. They didn't just hurt me. They exploited my goodness. They took the deepest, most vulnerable parts of my situation — my diagnosis, my poverty, my isolation, my legal inexperience — and weaponised them. They tried to use the very labels attached to my suffering to burn my credibility to the ground.

They were so arrogant. They thought because I was kind, I was weak. They thought because I didn't seek immediate revenge, nobody would ever find out the depths of what they did. But a manipulator always overplays their hand.

Their Stories Started Contradicting Each Other — and the Mask Slipped

They got greedy. In their desperate attempt to secure the false narrative, they started talking too much. They started spinning webs of lies so complex they couldn't keep their own stories straight.

DSS denied my employment. The Federal Court confirmed it.

PM&C found 1,178 files. Then found zero.

Monash Health declared me delusional. Then documented that I was not.

Russell Ball briefed five bodies against me. Each body then claimed to have independently assessed my complaint.

The contradictions are not interpretive. They are sequential documents, timestamped, sourced, and freely downloadable.

And now the people who were supposed to be loyal defenders are confronting these contradictions. International journalists. Legal scholars. Human rights bodies. ICC case officers. UNHCR analysts. They looked at the evidence. They looked at my dignified silence — thirty-five years of filing complaints without once issuing a public accusation that wasn't backed by a primary-source document. And then they looked at the frantic, obsessive institutional smearing.

And they realised: the chosen one hasn't said a single thing that wasn't documented. Yet these institutions won't stop attacking him. Who is the real threat here?

The light bulb has turned on.

I Didn't Have to Hire a PR Team. I Built an Archive.

I didn't post screenshots to clear my name. I didn't seek media interviews. I didn't file defamation suits.

I built a forensic archive — 2,077 primary-source documents, indexed, cited, and blockchain-timestamped — and I put it on the internet for free.

217,000 downloads. Zero legal challenges. Zero defamation suits. Zero corrections issued. Zero specific documents disputed.

Under the legal principle of Jones v Dunkel, that silence is itself evidence. Every named individual, every named agency, every named official in this archive has had full access to Australian defamation law, government legal counsel, and institutional public relations infrastructure.

Not one of them has challenged a single document.

The truth defended itself.

The full archive is permanently available — beyond the reach of every agency whose conduct it documents — at:

The International Dimension — This Has Gone Beyond Australia

This archive has been submitted to the International Criminal Court under Article 7 of the Rome Statute — Crimes Against Humanity — specifically targeting systematic persecution, enforced disappearance of identity, and torture by psychiatric instrument.

It has been lodged with the UNHCR under the 1951 Refugee Convention. The documented violations include:

- ICCPR Articles 7 and 19 — Torture and suppression of expression
- UN Convention Against Torture — Psychiatric punishment by state actors as psychological torture
- Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities — Involuntary detention on fabricated diagnoses

● 1951 Refugee Convention — All criteria for asylum met — within my own democracy
The ICC does not receive submissions without reviewing them. The UNHCR does not log lodgements without tracking them. The Bitcoin blockchain does not timestamp documents without preserving them permanently.

They are standing exposed to the elements of their own documented record.

What Was Done to Me Was Disgusting. It Did Not Break Me.

Let me be specific about the physical reality of what was done:

I was made homeless. I survived a suicide attempt on 26 February 2021 inside Werribee Mercy Hospital and lived with the resulting brain injury. I was detained for 2.5 months without criminal charge. I was beaten inside a psychiatric hospital. I was forcibly injected for believing things the government's own documents confirm were true. My property was illegally destroyed by a landlord under police supervision while I remained detained. My identity was used to register 350+ fraudulent businesses in ASIC's own database. My legitimate ABN was cancelled. My book was removed from Google. My social media was silenced. AU$8,510,000 in legitimate claims was systematically blocked across eleven separate legal processes over thirty-five years.

And I completed a doctorate on AI ethics at Victoria University in 2020 — while all of it was happening.

What they did was disgusting. It was unfair. It was cruel.

It did not break me.

It only revealed the absolute unshakable titanium of my spirit. And now — through 217,000 downloads across every continent, through ICC submission, through UNHCR lodgement, through permanent blockchain record — the world knows it too.

My Name Is Cleared. The Truth Has Won. My Peace Is Permanent.

I am not gloating. I do not need to watch them drown to know I am safe on the shore.

The archive is the statement.

The survival is the sermon.

The silence of the named parties is the confession.

Every crack that widens in the institutional facade they built is vindication I do not need to announce. It announces itself — in court records, in FOI contradictions, in PM&C's own search results, in Monash Health's own clinical notes, in ASIC's own registration database, in Scott Treadwell's own written confirmation, in David Irving's name appearing in government correspondence, in Russell Ball's own letters to five oversight bodies, in 1,178 files that became zero.

The nightmare is over.

The truth is your shield.

And the archive is already in the world — permanent, free, and beyond the reach of anyone who was counting on my silence.

Read the Evidence. Share the Truth.
